Religious Education News

Pentecost: There have been many great lives throughout history, but none live on like the story of Jesus' life. Why was this? Last Sunday we celebrated the Feast of Pentecost, where the Disciples received the Holy Spirit. The Disciples were gifted with the ability to speak many languages and took the message of Jesus to all ends of the globe.

The Disciples weren't given a guide book on how to fulfill their mission on earth. They prayed to the Holy Spirit to make the right judgements about how they could best serve God. They took their mission work very seriously, most of them making great sacrifices for the cause, but it is because of their great work and their unwavering faith that the great message of the Gospels are alive today.

Holy Trinity Sunday: This Sunday we celebrate the Feast of the Holy Trinity. The children celebrated mass today as a school to acknowledge our close connection to the Trinity. If you would like to go to church with your children this weekend, mass times are 6:00pm on Saturday evening and 10:00am Sunday.

Yours in faith,
Mark Galea - Religious Education Coordinator.

Art Lessons: Please ensure all students bring in a paint shirt so uniforms will not be stained.

Into The Mist - By: Neha Nair - Year 6

She waded out into the shallows. Waves of water lapped up against her bare legs, sending a chill up her already trembling body. She stole a glance back at what she had left behind on the shore. No regrets.

Fog wrapped its arm around the girl, adding to her feeling of growing trepidation. She held a lantern in her hand; it swayed gently by her side as she moved, leaking a milky light out into the night. That light was the only comfort she had.

As she stole away, the outline of the ship crept out of the mist like a silent predator. Would the ship bring the solace she had been longing for? She didn't know what to do. She thought it might not.

In the far distance she could spot that she was getting closer. Though she didn't know where she was. She had no one beside her. No one to look at. No one to keep her going.

As the mist worked its way inside her head, it turned her eyes a foggy white; leaving nothing but a smoking dead-eyed husk. A breezy wind slashed at her face as the fog grooved its evil dance all around her. Whilst she tried to keep herself steady from falling with the breeze on the isolated land.

She walked through the deserted land carefully step by step. As each footprint passed by, her body would send her a small shiver up her spine though she recognised that she was getting closer to the outline of the ship. As time flew by, she was now standing in front of that ship. When she realised that she was standing in front of an abandoned ship.

She pushed her hands onto the deck, as she could sense that there was a rumble from beneath the deck and then it opened. Dare she go inside? Suddenly the air turned black all around her. A shrill cry echoed in the mist. Though no one was there to help.

Footsteps slowly creaked on every... 'Aaaah!', she cried anxiously. She saw a guy all dressed in black walking towards her. She didn't know what to do. She doesn't even know where she was! So there was no point in running. Even if she did run, where would she run to? Who would she run to?

She didn't know the answer to any of those questions she had in mind. All she knew was that this ship and staying in this ship was not going to bring back the solace she had been longing for. She was so tired after a long exhausting walk when she found somewhere that was dry and away from the water. It wasn't very long before she had slept.

Back at the deck the man all dressed in black, was out looking for her. That was when he saw her sleeping...
